

28th International Congress of Psychology
August 8-13, 2004, Beijing, China

Abstract Book

Edited by: Weimin Mou, Su Li, Bingwu Qiu

Notice: This abstract book is distributed among the participants of the 28th International Congress of Psychology. The registered participants' paper abstracts will be published in a special issue of the International Journal of Psychology by Psychology Press in 2005.

Extra copies are available at the souvenirs counter on the 2nd floor.

2063 POSTER

Human development

2063.124 Non-adaptive education as formation of ability to self-Development, Valentin Ageyev, Educational Academy "Prestige", Kazakhstan

The "classical" education is the borrowing of social experience by individual man. The goal of "classical" education is appropriation by individual man of social samples. In result, the individual man adapts in society. The adaptive man is not capable to overcome social limits of individual possibilities. He is not capable to self-development. The non-adaptive man can overcome any limits of individual possibilities. The "non-adaptive" education is the creation by the individual man of own practice of creativity of individual possibilities. The non-adaptive man is capable to overcome limits of own possibilities. He is capable to self-development.